Memo

To: Berkshire Hathaway Managers ("The All-Star")
cc: Berkshire Directors
From: Warren E. Buffett
Date: December 16, 2014

This is my personal letter to compensation Berkshire's top priority and to get your help on executive planning (open, not closed).

The top priority – keeping everything else, including profits – is that all of us continue to maintain good Berkshire's reputation. We can't be perfect but we can try to be. But we will have success for more than 25 years. We can afford to lose money – even a lot of money. But we can't afford to lose reputation – even a sliver of reputation. We must continue to manage every act against not only what is legal but also what we would be happy to have written about on the front page of a national newspaper in an article written by an editorially intelligent reporter.

Sometimes your associates will say "Everybody else is doing it." This rationale is almost always a bad one if it is the only justification for a business action. It is totally unacceptable when considering a moral decision. Whenever somebody offers this phrase as a rationale, in effect they are saying that they can't come up with a good reason. If anyone gives this explanation, tell them to try being a little more creative and to have the right idea.

If you are working where people are highly committed to business, be sure to give me a call. Otherwise, it's very likely that if a given number of actions make each business, it's not close to the line and should be abandoned. There's plenty of money to be made in the center of the road. If it's questionable whether some action is close to the line, just assume it is unethical and forget it.

As a reminder, let me leave a message if there's any significant bad news. I can handle bad news but I don't like to deal with it after it has started to spread. A substance to face up immediately to bad news is what would produce a business from one that could have easily been disposed of some time ago about the demise of a firm with 8,000 employees.
